Shasha and I have made progress doing research to decide on which items are essential to create a successful portfolio template by studying similar websites. We decided that the most crucial elements are: contact section, about me, images of the freelancer work, a gallery to display work, book now button, separate pages for each category, portfolio, client reviews, and social media. We also decided on a color scheme that consisted of neutral colors such as black, beige, white, and brown. But, hypothetically each buyer would have the option to adjust each color scheme according to their liking or branding.

We have decided to meet in person and via zoom to create the html and Java layout. To create the optimal layout we will be largely using div tags, specifically columns to create a 2 columned page. We noticed many portfolios implement this feature as well as div tags with specified dimensions to ensure the layout remains consistent across the site. Lastly, to ensure the layout is user friendly we will be relying on friends to use the website and provide feedback. I've found that sometimes when you create a website, it's easy to forget to expand on certain features because you rely on other people having your background info.
